Directors' pay policy and disclosure: your unique compliance tool

Directors' pay is a perennial hot topic and attracts a lot of political, media and public attention.

There is a plethora of rules around both the design and disclosure of directors' remuneration, and the conduct of remuneration committees is increasingly under scrutiny to ensure they are rewarding directors appropriately for performance.

New rules and the new UK Corporate Governance Code apply from 1 January 2019.

To assist with navigating this increasingly complex landscape, Linklaters has developed a new online product, to help companies put together their annual directors' remuneration report.

The tool will also enable companies which need to manage their legal spend carefully to do a first compliance review "in-house".

The new product has:

Online benefits of fast accessibility to required information, links to underlying legislation and regulatory guidance, and guidance on what the rules mean, market and best practice.

Special features, including what goes where in the single figure table, a step by step guide on the CEO: UK employee pay ratio disclosure and forward planning top tips.

The product also includes a print-friendly version you can download, print and keep.
